IS REALLY GRIEVED BECAUSE AMERICA WON'T DEPORT HIM

Dallenbeck, Here With His Family, Decides Country Won't Do at All.

Only Way.

A message was received at Ellis Island a few days ago that puzzled the immigration authorities immensely. It came from Canton, O., and it said in substance: "I am coming with my family to be deperted." It was signed, "Carl Dallenback." Who the sender was and why he thought he and his family would be deported was a mystery.

Yesterday Dallenbeck and his folks arrived at the gates of the Ellis Island ferry at the Battery. He was robust and of prosperous appearance and his wife was well dressed and good looking. The elder daughter, Marguerite, who is aixteen years old, was particularly pretty, and a pounger child, Helen, seven years of age, was bright and attractive, They brought with them about a dozen pieces of baggage and a general air of contentment.

The head of the family explained that he was a jeweller, but that he did not find, after a three months' etay in this country, that he was making the money that he expected, and his wife missed the bracing air and the view of the Alps that she was used to in their former home in Chaux Befonds, Switzerland, and the children did not take kindly to some American ways, so they decided to go back to their native land and would consent to be deported. Their plan was to accept the hospitality of the Government on Ellis Island until a convenient ship would be leaving on which they could be put that would take them to the port nearest to their old home in Switzerland.

They evidently had taken up their abode in America on approval, and finally decided that it would not do, and that it was only the decent thing for this country to return them to their native land as comfortably as possible.

They were surprised and shocked to learn that this Government did not consider itself obliged to see them home, as it were, nor was it willing to force the steamship company that brought them here to bear the ex-pense of taking them back. It seemed so ungracious to them, after they had tried the country in good faith and found it lacking. Then it developed that their funds were almost depleted. They had lots of belongings, but little cash, and how they were going to get along was a source of real worry. Here it was that Patrolman Joe Murry, who is general guardian of all who are sojourning at the Battery, decided that it was a case for Pastor Restin of the Lutheran Mission. So he directed them to No. 8 State Street for their case to be for their case to be diagnosed by the reverend gentleman in charge.

The latter entertained the robust father and his attractive family and notified the Swiss Consul. Their next move was up to the home of the Swiss Benevolent Society on West Sixtyseventh Street, where they are now temporarily residing.
